what is studioshare.org™ and aren't you an independent photography studio anymore?

StudioShare.org™ is andreas' latest brainchild. the creation was driven by the need to reinvent professional collaboration among photographers. the spurious noise studio is still completely independent, but when the studio or its equipment is idle, we're using StudioShare.org™ to rent it out to fellow photographers.

what is 'spurious noise'?

technically speaking, 'spurious noise' is defined as: 'circuit noise or interference that is like a signal.' for us, it's what you get when you let some geeky know-it-all name a studio.

is the spurious noise studio an audio recording studio?

no.

what are your rates?

rates vary for each individual project. the minimum booking time is a half-day. please contact us at info@spuriousnoisestudio.com for more information and a price quote.

do you accept credit cards?

do you have a brochure?

yes. you can download our brochure as a PDF from the ‘downloads’ page.

how far in advance should i book a photographer?

we recommend booking photographers at least two weeks in advance. shoots requiring elaborate preparation or an offsite location, including weddings, should be booked as far ahead of time as possible, at least two to four weeks in advance.

what is included with the booking of a photographer?

typically, our services include a consultation with the photographer, the photographic service, basic retouching and editing, and a set number of prints or digital images determined by the photographer. additional prints and images can also be purchased.

will you archive my photographs?

we archive all photographic services for one year. additional archival options can be provided and should be discussed with the photographer during your consultation.

who owns the rights to my photograph?

the rights to photographs are maintained by each individual photographer. they reserve the right to use images in their portfolios, and in studio marketing material, unless expressly forbidden otherwise.
